Is this accurate? I landed on this language to address Bicky's comment:

The state agencies have the lead for this effort and EPA is providing technical support; EPA will remain in close coordination with state agencies as the study progresses.

Sorry am in a mtg having a hard time tracking -- I raised a question as to some language but did not I don't think recommend substitute language, partly because I don't know what EPA is doing -- has it offered support? Has it supported? tap water monitoring? So may still need your input. Thanks.

Here is the revised letter, accepting all of Daniel's changes to our version (with the exception of his addition of the penultimate paragraph we discussed), and adding DiPPH to the list of chemicals in the 3rd paragraph.

Thank you all for your extremely quick review. We appreciate it.

Hi Diane, thanks

After reviewing the incomings and chatting with Bicky again, wanted to share this draft with you. I think the extended regulatory discussions are really unnecessary in our response. The public seems to be looking more for what we are doing right now, and I think that's where the letter's focus should remain. What do you think about the attached? Happy to talk further at 3:45 – or if you all agree, maybe this obviates the need for a call – these are my edits, with a couple others from Carrie, our SDWA expert. Thanks,
